

PROFORMA A

PROFORMA A is a standard form for the design of a building. It is used to provide a consistent format for the design of a building. The form is divided into sections for the design of the building, the design of the site, and the design of the surrounding environment. The form is used to provide a consistent format for the design of a building. The form is divided into sections for the design of the building, the design of the site, and the design of the surrounding environment.

PROFORMA B

PROFORMA B is a standard form for the design of a building. It is used to provide a consistent format for the design of a building. The form is divided into sections for the design of the building, the design of the site, and the design of the surrounding environment. The form is used to provide a consistent format for the design of a building. The form is divided into sections for the design of the building, the design of the site, and the design of the surrounding environment.

Section	Description
1.0	General Information
2.0	Building Information
3.0	Site Information
4.0	Surrounding Environment
5.0	Design of the Building
6.0	Design of the Site
7.0	Design of the Surrounding Environment